ADVENTURES ON A CANAL BOAT.

George looked about among the passengers who were beginning to come on deck, and noticed a monstrously fat man whose bulk nearly filled the companion-way where he stood.

"Half a dozen of us little fellows will have to go forward, to trim the boat, if he stays aft," said a boyish voice at George's side.

The speaker was a lad almost a head shorter than himself, and may be a year or two younger, but with a bright honest face, which expressed a good deal of quiet self-reliance and firmness of character. George, who had been little of the world, and who lacked self-reliance, felt drawn at once to the owner of that face.

Festively that he with pretty good clothes, and a coat which was not a bad fit, our young poet—who was troubled with a painful consciousness of having outgrown his own garments—instinctively pulled down his coat sleeves, which, as had been said, were short.

"He'd better not come up on deck," he replied in the same tone of pleasantry. "He'd go through these tight boards like an elephant!"

The lad—whom we shall call the Other Boy—began to laugh. "Once when I was on the canal," he said, "I saw just such a fat man on the deck of a line-boat, as was coming to a bridge. 'Low bridge!' says the steersman. It was a low bridge—very low; and the boat having no freight, was very high out of the water. The fat man got down and lay on his back, and his feet towards the bow. But, gracious! he heaved almost as far up into the sky when he was lying down as when he stood up. He saw the bridge coming, in a direction that was certain to cut him off about six inches below his waistcoat buttons. I was on the towpath; and I screamed, 'Mister! mister! you'll get killed!' He knew it, but what could he do? The boat couldn't stop, and the bridge wouldn't go! In a minute he would be crushed like a four hundred-pound egg."

"What did he do?" said George.

"There was only one thing he could do; for it was too late to get up and run aft, and he couldn't crawl away. He put up his feet! I suppose he thought he was going to stop the boat, or may be push the bridge over. But the bridge pushed him! It was funny to see his eyes stick out, and hear him roar, 'Hold on! wait! stop! em!'—I suppose he meant the horses,—as he slid on the deck, and finally rolled off into the water. He went in like a whale,—such a splash! He was so fat he couldn't sink; but how he did splutter and blow canal water when he came out!"

The Other Boy had hardly finished his story, when—"Bridge!"—called the man at the helm; and both boys laughing heartily, got down on the deck, with the other passengers, to pass under.

George's new acquaintance appeared to be familiar with life on the canal, and had several such stories to tell. George in his turn became confidential.

"I used to peddle apples on the 'big ditch,' as we call it," he said, as they sat on some light baggage on the deck, and looked off at the passing scenery. They were my uncle's apples, and I gave him half I got for them. That made him willing to let me have the fruit, and a half-day to myself now and then. I would drop on to the line-boats from the bridge, and—if the steersman wouldn't lay up for me—get off at the next bridge, or on another boat. I was a little chap when I began,—very timid,—and it was some time before I completely mastered the art of getting on and off. You see, it don't do to jump down on the side from which the boat is coming, for the bridge might knock you over before you could take care of yourself. So you look for a good place, where there's no freight or passengers, and then run to the other side, and wait till the spot you've picked out comes through, and then drop down, and you're all right."

"Yes, I see," said the Other Boy.

"Once I dropped in such a hurry that I left my basket of apples on the bridge! I got well laughed at, and, what was worse," said George, "when I went back, half an hour later,—for the steersman wouldn't lay up, since I couldn't give him an apple, and I had to jump to the first boat we met,—the pigs had eaten up all my apples, except a few which I found about with the basket in the canal. Another time I put my basket up on a bridge, but couldn't get up myself. I thought I could, though, and I hung on, jumping and kicking in the air, while the boat passed from under me, and there I clung, right over the water. The boatman only laughed at me. There was nobody to pull me up,—yelling did no good,—and I couldn't very well hold on till another boat came along, with a good deck for me to fall on."

"What did you do?" asked the Other Boy, highly amused.

"I dropped into the water. Luckily I could swim, and I got out without assistance. The boatmen laughed louder than ever, when they saw me, and that hurt my feelings."

"Just like 'em! they're pretty rough fellows, the most of 'em!" said the Other Boy, with the air of one who knew.

"On one boat," George continued, "I met with a series of accidents. In the first place, getting on, I was a moment late, and instead of alighting where I expected, I jumped into the stomach of a big Dutchman lying on the deck, smoking his pipe. He started up with a grunting 'Hough! hough!'—very much as if it had been a fat hog I had jumped on,—and away went I and my apples. First I picked myself up, and then proceeded to pick up as many of my apples as hadn't rolled overboard. Afterwards I gave all I saved, together with all my money, for a bill that turned out to be counterfeit. Then the steersman carried me off. Then, in getting up on a bridge,—you have to step along on the deck, you know, till you can give a good jump, and you can't see where you step,—I kicked a dinner-bell off into the water. The cook sprang to catch me by the legs, and came very near going overboard after his bell. I was too quick for him; but I was no sooner on the bridge than a shower of turnips followed me. I think the enraged cook, the steersman, and the deck hands, must have thrown away half a barrel of turnips, all on my account. They went under the bridge, and over the bridge, and hit the bridge, but not one hit the mark they were aimed at, if I except a few lively spatters of juice and mashed pulp, from one or two that struck the timbers disagreeably near my head. As soon as I was at a good dodging distance, I yelled to the steersman that he'd better lay up for me next time. But I was careful never to get on that boat again."—From "Fast Friends," in St. Nicholas for January.

A Devoted Adherent.

The death is reported from Genoa of Carlotta Benettini, the friend of Mazzini. She was born in 1812, began her political career in 1833, when she was arrested on a charge of writing and distributing revolutionary proclamations, and of being a Mazzinian agent. While in prison she was threatened with the rack and with death, to induce her to reveal the names of her accomplices, and was compelled to look on while her associates, Bilka and Gavotti, were being dragged to execution. "We can die but once," she said, and then remained silent. She was detained a year in prison at that time. When Genoa revolted in 1849, Carlotta, with her young daughter, fought on the barricades, and continued ever since to take part in the Republican agitations of the day. She had enlisted three hundred men in the cause at the time of the unsuccessful movement on the 29th of June, and in spite of severe persecution from the police, received Mazzini and Pisanotti into her house; and on the occasion of the expedition of La Spezia, in 1860, concealed Mazzini and Rosolino Pilo in her own house. Again, when, in 1870, Mazzini was confined in the fortress of Gaeta, this devoted adherent hastened thither in the hope of obtaining permission to attend to his comfort.

THE SUN.

WEEKLY, SEMI-WEEKLY, DAILY.

THE WEEKLY SUN is too widely known to require any extended recommendation; but the reasons which have already given it fifty thousand subscribers, and which will give it many thousands more, are briefly as follows:

It is a first-rate newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in its condensed and important, at full length when of moment, and always presented in a clear, intelligible and interesting manner.

It is a first-rate family paper, full of entertaining and instructive reading of every kind, but containing nothing that can offend the most delicate and scrupulous taste.

It is a first-rate story paper. The best tales and romances of current literature are carefully selected and logically printed in its pages.

It is an independent political paper. The most fresh and instructive articles on agricultural topics regularly appear in this department.

It is an independent political paper, belonging to no party and wearing no color. It fights for principle and for the election of the best men to office. It especially devotes its energies to the exposure of the great corruptions that now weaken and disgrace our country, and threaten to undermine republican institutions altogether. It has no fear of knives, and asks no favors from their supporters.

It reports the fashions for the ladies and the markets for the men, especially the cattle markets, to which it pays particular attention.

Finally, it is the cheapest paper published. One dollar a year will secure it for any subscriber. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have THE WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Any one who sends a single dollar will get the paper for a year.

THE DAILY SUN—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription price 50 cents a month, or $5.00 a year. To clubs of 10 or over, a discount of 20 per cent. To clubs of 50 or over, a discount of 30 per cent.

Address, "THE SUN," New York City.
